Branching Out

Did you know that there are law library branches at the Massillon and Alliance municipal court buildings? Each branch has free Westlaw access and Anderson's Ohio Forms on CD-ROM on the computers as well as the Ohio statutes and other basic Ohio texts in print. If you would like a basic overview of how to use the computer at either of these branches, call the main library at (330) 451-7380 and someone will meet you at the branch to explain the resources available. There is also a branch in the Canton Municipal building, but there are only Ohio print resources at this location.

"Kids' Causes of Action"

Ann Haralambie's article in the Spring issue of Family Advocate raises some interesting issues.

Children are most often involved in cases dealing in neglect or abuse and custody and/or visitation battles. The result is usually the breakup of the family unit with the child being removed from his/her family, friends and in many cases even siblings, then placed in the foster care system. Once in the system, the child's future is bleak. Haralambie states that "few resources are available to assist children one they 'age out' of the system, and many children become homeless or incarcerated within the first year or two after leaving foster care."

Children who do survive foster care carry deep scars throughout their lives and need lots of expensive psychological help to break the cycle of violence and abuse. "Tort law may provide an avenue for achieving redress for the child victims of domestic torts and may provide the only remedy for the long-term consequences of the abuse."

Topics covered in Haralambie's article include: "Identifying causes of action," "Collateral estoppel," "Statutes of limitation and repose," "Immunity," "Insurance coverage," "Preserving children's claims," and "Filing the case."

Haralambie concludes that "... it is important to recognize that the circumstances presented in the family law or child welfare case also give rise to potential claims, which should be recognized and preserved. Even if the tort action is not pursued at the time, the attorney should anticipate that an action may be filed in the future."
